A COMPLETE GEAR TRAINING PROGRAM ON MASTER LEVEL (English spoken)

Geared mechanical power transmissions are vital for transport, aerospace, power generation, agriculture, defence, material handling, industrial process equipment, food-processing and printing industries. They improve the operational efficiency of a transmission and reduce manufacturing costs and environmental impact. However, universities, technical institutes and colleges often fail to develop appropriate courses. In Europe, a mechanical engineer gets on average only 5 hours of gear training, not enough to be effective in industry.

EUROTRANS invited the top European gear trainers and developed a comprehensive training course focussing on Gear Quality & Failure. Addressing a European audience, this residential training is organised by Design Unit, Newcastle University, UK and CETIM, Senlis, France.
